

Trends in U.S. Organizing

Hybrid online institute

Mon, Sep 26 - Sun, Oct 16, 2022

Tuition: $200 | Register by: Sep 19

Institute description

Lately, it seems that union organizing is busting through all of our newsfeeds. We are seeing new industries organizing - some with success and others not so much - and traditional union workers organizing with greater urgency. In this institute, we will examine the recent trends, successes, and roadblocks organizers are facing. We will also explore the impact of COVID-19, the economy, and certain legal policies that affect labor rights. Two live classroom sessions will be held online for discussion and activities on October 6 and 13 from 4:30 - 6:30 p.m. central time.

About hybrid online institutes

The hybrid institute is an online class structured into weekly instructional units with scheduled live classroom time. Each unit contains readings, short videos, activities, and student discussion boards with weekly deadlines that explores a given topic. Participants may access the course anytime 24/7 to complete the weekly units whenever it fits their schedule. Live sessions will be held on October 6 and 13 from 4:30 - 6:30 p.m. central time.
